I long for a kiss from your lips mother, As of yore they were pressed to mine, How the hot tears qual from my burning eyes When I think of that happy time.

To neetle again in your arms mother, Held close to your fond loving heart, So that nothing could creap in between us To sever our fond hearts apart.

But I know that it ne'er can be, mother, I must go through this world alone, Never feel of your hand the soft pressure Nor hear of your voice the sweet tone.

For they've laid you under the sod mother, That's shrouding the hill and the vale, And weep as I may at your lonely grave You can not respond to my wail.
